SENATOR RANSOM DID HIS PEOPLE A GREAT SERVICE

DETECTED MONSTER MEASURE

IS NOW DOING EXTENSIVE FARMING ON HIS BROAD ACRES IN NORTH CAROLINA

By H. J. H.

A traveler, passing through Weldon, N. C., will often see on the platform of the train-shed a man past the allotted three score and ten, tall, erect, stately—a figure like that of the Senators of Rome. In the winter, a long rusty overcoat and a wide-brimmed, black, slouch hat; and in the summer a suit of linen and an expansive "Panama" straw seem an incongruous attire for such a man. Still more strange does the costume seem if you have seen General Matt W. Ransom in the Senate of the United States. No more imposing figure has stood within those portals; at least within the memory of the present generation. After a long and distinguished career in the Senate, he went to Mexico as Minister of the United States, and then returned to his farm home in North Carolina. He is now the largest land-owner in that State.

Twenty plantations give employment to hundreds of people. Two hundred and fifty horses and mules are needed each season to cultivate the crops, and the result last year was a crop of 1,500 bales of cotton. This year he expects to raise a crop of from 2,600 to 2,500 bales. He has not invested in non-taxable stocks and bonds, but has chosen instead to improve his fertile acres, thereby adding to the a crop of from 2.00 to 2.00 bates. He has not retailed acres, thereby adding to the bonds, but has chosen instead to improve his fertile acres, thereby adding to the tailable resources of his native State.

If would take volumes to relate the story of his distinguished career, of his great services to his State as soldier and as statesman. There is, however, one event which deserves to be kept fresh in the memories of the Southern people. It was at the outset of his senatorial career. The war had passed. The blight of reconstruction had fallen over the South, and the Democrats in Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ought to bring relief. The third of March, Congress seemed still powerless to do ught to bring relief. The third of March, Congress should be ready to adjourn. Senators were dozing in their seats or napping in the cloak-rooms. The dreary routine of business was taking its regular course, when Senator Kansom, of North Carolina, arose was taking its regular course, when Senator the bill (H. R. No. 1273) to regulate agreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 1273) to regulate proceedings in mandamus. I wish before the bill is enrolled to have it referred to the Judiclary Committee for examination."

The Vice-President declared the motion out of order. Mr. Ransom then moved that the bill be recalled from the House, in whose custody it was. The motion was agreed to, and the bill was returned to the Senate, where it died with the expiration of the session.

ed that the bill be recalled from the House,, in whose custody it was. The motion was agreed to, and the bill was returned to the Senate, where it died with the expiration of the session.

AN IMPORT MEASURE.

This is all that may be gathered from the official record of that day. There were no speeches made; there was nothing to atthact the attention of drowsy Senators, but the adoption of Mr. Ransom's motion killed a bill, which, if it had become a law, would have ruined many of the Southern States.

When the war ended the South was invaded by an army of carpet-baggers. When the war ended the South was invaded by an army of carpet-baggers, a condition of financial chaos in the South. The enoney derived from taxes a condition of financial chaos in the South. The enoney derived from taxes a condition of financial chaos in the South. The enoney derived from taxes a condition of financial chaos in the South. The enoney derived from taxes a condition of financial chaos in the South. The enoney derived from taxes at the south season of the south of the several States, but vigorous attempts were afterwards justly repudiated by the several States, but vigorous attempts were afterwards justly repudiated by the several States, but vigorous attempts were still being made by the benchloiders to compel their payment.

The first of the schemes instituted for this purpose was put in operation in 1874. Mr. R. C. Parsons, of Ohio, introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to Mr. R. C. Parsons, of Ohio, introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to regulate proceedings in mandamus. The bill provided that a proceeding in mandamus against a United States officer, who might die or resign, should be kept alive against his successor, and hold him to the duty required by the writ.

A SINISTER MOTIVE.

This bill went to the Senate on the 20th day of February, and was referred to the Judiciary Committee. For nearly four months the bill remained in committee, and on June 8th it was reported to the Senate by Mr. Frelinghuys and as a proper remedy."

Mr. Frelinghuysen reported the amendment in good faith, and probably had no idea of the sinister motive concealed therein.

DID NOT ESCAPE HIM.

The bill as amended passed the Sena te and went back to the House for concurrence in the amendment. Mr. Eldrid Eq. of Wisconsin, moved its reference to the Judiciary Committee. General Benjamin T. Butler, who was the reputed father of the amendment, said that he hoped the bill as amended would pass. Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, desired to move an amendment. The Speaker decided that a vote on the amendment would be in order, and a vote was taken. There were 88 ayes and 56 noes. As a two-thirds vote was necessary, the amendment was defeated.

There were 88 ayes and 56 noes. As a two-thirds vote was necessary, the amendment was defeated.

The bill then laid on the table for the remainder of the session. Late at night on the last day of the following short session the bill was called up through the efforts of General Butler, and was smuggled through the House with the amendment while most of the members were asleep. It was immediately taken to the Senate. Then it was that Senator Ransom made his motion.

WOULD TAKE NO CHANCES.

The surreptitious manner in which the bill had been passed along had prevented a discovery of the dangers there in concealed. Senator Ransom's suspicions had been aroused, and he was on the alert. When he heard the title of the bill read in the Senate he immediately went to the clerk's desk and carefully examined the amendments. Seeing that his apprehensions were realized he hurried to where his colleague was sitting, but he could not convince him that the bill was a dangerous one. He then saw Senator Thurman and Senator Bayard. They advised Ransom to see Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, who was then chairmen of the Judiciary Committee. Ransom hurriedly exposed the hidden meaning of the bill to Edmunds, who saw the point at once and said. "Ransom, I see the monster. It is there I will see Grant to-morrow and have him veto the bill."

Senator Ransom replied: "I cannot take the risk. I don't know what might happen. You might die, Grant might die, I must defeat this bill now. If enactinto law it will ruin my people. You must help me out to-night."

With the aid of Senator Edmunds, the motion to recall the bill was carried, and it was killed.

Only the vigilance of Senator Ransom prevented its becoming a law. If it had passed the payment of all the bogus special tax bonds would have been forced and several of the Southern States would have been ruined. Writs of mandamus would have been issued by the Federal Circuit Court judges, and the sheriffs of the several counties would have been stripped of the taxes paid into their hands. Nothing would have been left for the maintenance of their local supports it was a jurylike dayson that was a verted. CAUSE FOR GRATITUDE. government. It was a terrible danger that was averted.

government. It was a terrible danger that was averted.

Only once until recently has a bill of importance been defeated in the Senate by the dilatory incides of one man, and that was when Robert Toombs, of Georgia, talked an appropriation bill to death. Had Senator Ransom failed in his efforts to recall the bill he could have done as Toombs did, for he still held the chorts to recan the bin he could have done as roombs did, for he still held the floor. The welfare, the prosperity, the very being of his beloved State and Southland were dependent on the issue, and the gratitude of Southern hearts will always go out in loving remembrance of how Senator Ransom stood in the breach and thrust aside impending ruin.

DAN KANE WILL NOT HANG

Governor Tyler Commuted His Sentence Yesterday.

gressional District-Acts of Assembly Out-liems Gathered from the Capitol.

Governor Tyler yesterday commuted the death sentence of Dan Kane, the negro wife murderer of Wise county, to imprisonment for life in the penitentiary. Following is the Governor's endorsement on the papers:

"Daniel B. Kane, convicted in the County Court of Wise, at the January term of 1901, of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hanged, for killing his wife, one Millie Kane. The prisoner is a poor ignorant negro, who seems to have been infatuated with his wife, who did not reciprocate his affection, and who refused to live with him, though from all the evidence he seems to have been peculiarly kind to her and made repeated efforts to induce her to give up her bad associates with whom she was hving and return to him. She took every opportunity to display her preference for others and to arouse the jealousy of her husband. "On the day of the killing the prisoner met her in company with two other men. and begged her to desist from her course to do, and the prisoner, while almost crazed from jealousy, shot her. While the conduct of his wife was not suffcient to justify his killing her, yet when reviewed in the light of human weakness, and from the evident lack of pre meditation in his act, imprisonment for life—a scarcely less severe sentence than death—seems to be a sufficient punish-

AN EASY WAY

To Keep Well.

It is easy to keep well if we would only observe each day a few simple rules of health.

The all important thing is to keep the stomach right, and to do this it is not necessary to diet or to follow a set rule or bill of fare. Such pampering simply makes a capricious appetite and a feeling that certain favorite articles of food must be avoided.

Professor Wiechold gives pretty good advice on this subject; he says: "I am 68 years old and have never had a serious illness, and at the same time my life has een largely an indoor one, but I carly discovered that the way to keep healthy was to keep a healthy stomach, not by cating bran crackers or disting of any sort; on the contrary, I always cat what my appetite craves, but for the past eight years I have made it a daily practice to take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tab-lets after each meal, and I attribute my rebust health for a man of my age to the regular use of Stuart's Tablets.

"My physician first advised me to use them, because he said they were perfectly harmless and were not a secret patent medicine, but contained only the natural digestives, peptones and diastase, and after using them a few weeks I have never ceased to thank him for his advice. "I honestly believe the habit of taking Strart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals is the real health habit, because their use brings health to the sick and alling, and preserves health to the well and strong." Men and women past fifty years of age need a safe digestive after meals to insure a perfect digestion and to ward off dimest widely used is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They are found in every well regulated household from Maine to California, and in Great Britain and Australia are rapid-ly pushing their way into popular favor. All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspensia Tablets, full sized packages at 50 cents, and for a weak stomach a fifty-cent package will often do fifty dollars' worth of Kaufmann & Co.

Our Grand Easter Sale

will Eclipse Any Heretofore Held

Beauty Show is none too effervescent a term to use when describing our store, as it now appears, or the goods that we invite appears, or the goods that we invite you to inspect the whole of this Easter week. The stock is new, from the best makers, and is distinguished for its character as High-Grade Merchandise. In our Millinery Department there are hundreds of ready-trimmed hats of beautiful designs, the output of artists' hands in the headgear craft, while we have a large number of exquisite Imported Model Hats, fresh from the salons of the most renowned modistes of Europe. In the Suit, Coat and Skirt Departments nothing is found wanting in the way of novelty and extreme style, while the colorings of the garments are unsurpassed in attractiveness; and to set the whole forth as a marvel of this remarkable sale week, we are prepared to place our prices against any in the city for cheapness, when quality, manufacture and style are remembered, for each garment comes from reputable houses of the large cities of the world. To test our statements we merely invite you to call and see if our words are not proven facts.

The Millinery Sale Will Delight You, for we have prepared ourselves with trimmed hats of inestimable worth, taking the most favored styles of the great modistes of both continents and adapting them to your requirements. They have all the beauty, the chic and the marvelously fine material of their extravagantly expensive models, but at prices that will suit your pockets. We give a few items of worth, and set our sale price upon them. A beautiful design in large basket straw braid, exquisitely trimmed with imported French flowers of the small series, set off with bows and loops of double shaded satin ribbon.

Another large hat of Swiss straw and crinoline braid, artistically bent into the form of a toque. The underbrim is fancifully made with finest silk net in a series of puffs. A third is a becoming creation of pleated silk tulle, the same material being used for the brim in close tucks; trimmed from the back is a large spray of shaded berries

Then we show a handsome model made of gilt braid, with alternate rows of silk net. The shape is a droop, and is trimmed with some delicately shaded pink and lawender thistle flowers all around the crown, and is toned by white silk illusion being drawn over the flowers.

A. Ayers. The jury and all the court officers ask it, the judge and Commonwealth's Attorney do not oppose, and the petition is personally presented by the Senator from the district, Hon. R. P. Bruce, who writes in a second effort to get favor-able action: 'I have, since my return from Richmond, during the present term able action: of our County Court, had the opportunity of hearing an expression of the people from all over the county in reference to the commutation of Kane's sentence and there is hardly a dissenting voice. I have only heard one or two say 'it probably ought not to be done.' While the masses and prominent men of the county enquire of me anxiously about the case and express hope that the sentence will be commuted. I have never heard such unanimous expression of opinion regarding any criminal case as I hear in favor of Kane's sentence being commuted. I know I would not intentionally mislead you in this matter; and I have no personal interest in the result. I am promptsonal interest in the result. I am prompted alone by a sense of right towards an ignorant, helpless negro, without money or friends." In view of this statement and other considerations, I have, after having the case under advisement for almost a month and giving the case most careful consideration, decided to com-mute the sentence to life imprisonment." NEWS IN THE COUNTY.

Counterfeit Money Shows Up-Charged With Stealing Chickens.

A negro man was arrested Friday afternoon by Special Officer C. H. Hech-ler, charged with passing counterfeit money. He was examined by 'Squire George W. Thomas, who sent him before the United States Commissioner.

It is said that the man entered a store at Fair Oaks last Thursday and purchased $5 worth of goods. He gave a $20 note to the storekeeper, who later discovered that it was counterfelt. that it was counterfelt.

Richard Starke, charged with breaking into the house of Ben. Franklin, was tried yesterday before 'Squire James T. Lewis. The case was continued un

What Education Means.

"If I had to take unto myself a youngster and saddle myself with the responsibility of fitting him or her with an educa-tion," said the man of the house, "I should certainly choose a boy, looking at the matter from a business point of view, and les, of two infants from a foundling asylum, the one a boy, the other a girl. "Girls," went on the man, "are so much more expensive when it comes to the ques-tion of education. And when the boy and the girl have been put through the most thorough of courses you will find that, while the boy's tuition has been accomplished at a less cost than has that of the girl, the girl has less actual knowl-edge to show for the expenditure."

Here the woman spoke.
"It occurs to me," she said, "that you are involved in an impossible comparison. In the first place, there is no parallel edu-cation for the boy and the girl. In the second place, the money invested on the girl-although it may be more than is spent on the boy-brings in an immeasurably greater return. I speak of matri-mony. Let me ask what you mean when you speak of educating a boy?"

'Why," said the man, "when I say educating him, I mean educating him. Of course, not filling his head with empty fripperies that will be of no use to him when he gets past the age of going to school. Suppose the boy is intended a business life, the cost of schooling him will be much less than if he be booked for a profession. For, to be a professional man he must take a university course and afterward two or three years' training in the law or medicine or theoabout the adoption, by well-to-do: fami- logy, or whatever he is going to he in, distinctly a matter of assurate standards.

But when he has passed all this he is in possession of a thorough education. When the girl has gone the course she is emp-

"You simply don't understand education as applied to woman," said the wife. "A girl is not being educated when she is taight that five times two are ten, or that there are so many hundreds of bones in the human body."

Well, then, how is she educated?" "She is educated," said the woman, "by being sent to school as a young child, and transferred as quickly as possible to a n etropolitan atmosphere, where she is a boarding-school miss. Now she is to learn how to walk, how to talk, how to dress, how to appear at the matinee, how to dress, how becomingly a bunch of vio-lets, how to hold her skirt, how to hold her eyes, and how to make a mun believe she is interested in what he says when she hasn't the faintest conception of the subject. To learn these things she must be completely tutored, and she must pay accordingly. When she is graduated she accordingly. When she is graduated she is able to view the world as a woman of the world, and at the same time through the apparently unsophisticated eyes of a school girl, and if she isn't then able to contract an alliance that will repay her parents many fold, she is an exceptional
